

Stephen Clift, BA, PhD

Stephen Clift is Professor Emeritus, Canterbury Christ Church University, and former Director of the Sidney De Haan Research Centre for Arts and Health. He is a Visiting Professor in the International Centre for Community Music, York St John University where he is working on an Arts and Humanities funded project to promote networking in the field of singing for health research. He also contributes as a Visiting Professor to the MA programme on music and wellbeing in the School of Music, University of Leeds. Currently, he is associated with the Salzburg Institute for Arts in Medicine, and is working with colleagues internationally to promote critical appraisal of research and evidence reviews in the field of arts and health. Over an academic career spanning forty years, Stephen has made contributions to research, practice and training on HIV/AIDS prevention and sex education, international travel and health, and the health promoting school in Europe. From 2000-2022 he pursued research in arts and health and particularly the potential value of group singing for health and wellbeing. Stephen was one of the founding editors of Arts & Health: An international journal for research, policy and practice. He is joint editor with Professor Paul Camic of the Oxford Textbook of Creative Arts, Health and Wellbeing. <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-5442-267X>
